

Professional Practise Model for Nursing

Tony Dolan, Executive Director of Nursing Services Sir Charles Gairdner Hospital

Sir Charles Gairdner Hospital, Verdun Street Nedlands, WA, 6009

Leadership through mutual respect from nurses at all levels to enhance a professional practise environment that embraces diversity in colleagues, staff, patients and the community
Leadership through advocacy of patients and their families, the community and staff, for the purpose of elevating the profession of nursing
Leadership through positive role modelling at all levels by showing positive, exemplary behaviour

Innovation through reflecting on my practise and current methods, taking ownership for any challenges and looking for improvements; all part of the critical thinking that is essential to Charles nursing
Innovation through research and discovery in which nurses play a vital part in creating, shaping and implementing improved nursing practise

Empowerment through quality, interdisciplinary education to stay up to date and improve skills and knowledge for future advancement and to empower patients and the community
Empowerment through influence by having a voice to determine where nurses can change practise; and to positively affect the behaviours and attitudes of others

Professional Practice through expertise where nurses combine a passion for nursing with technical skills and critical thinking to deliver excellence
Professional practise through teamwork where nurses communicate and collaborate within a multidisciplinary team to deliver safe patient care

Excellent Outcomes for All
Nurses work collaboratively with the patient, their family, the interdisciplinary team and the community to achieve excellent outcomes for all
